Re: Lucrative Offices

Dear Mr. Jacobi:

This is in reply to your letter of June 19, inquiring if a township trustee could also serve as a town marshal or deputy marshal.

There have been several Attorney General's Opinions that a city police officer is merely an employee of the municipality which he serves and not the holder of a lucrative office. Based on these previous opinions of the Attorney General's office, we believe a town marshal or deputy would be considered in the same capacity as a city police officer.

In answer to your question, we believe a township trustee could also serve as a town marshal or deputy marshal and not be in violation of Article 2, Section 9 of the Indiana Constitution.

Very truly yours,

Kenneth R. Beesley
